Teacher’s Guide

Wanted: A Just Right Government

Time Needed: One class period
Materials Needed:
Student worksheets
Power Point and projector -or- overhead transparencies
Scissors and tape/glue (class set)

Copy Instructions:
Reading (2 pages; class set)
Cut & Paste Activity (2 pages; enough for pairs; do not copy back to back)
Crossword Review (1 page; class set)

Learning Objectives. Students will be able to:
- Describe how the weaknesses of the Articles of Confederation led to the writing of the Constitution
- Compare the Virginia plan with the New Jersey plan
- Compare the Articles of Confederation with the Constitution
- Identify cause/effect relationships in the development of America’s government

STEP BY STEP

☐ ANTICIPATE with a quick poll of the class. Ask students, “Imagine we were going to have a class ice cream party and we could only have one kind of ice cream. How many people would want chocolate? Strawberry? Rocky Road?” After the poll, ask students whether they think it would be possible to get everyone to agree. What about if the class could have two flavors? Three? Would it be possible to at least satisfy everyone, even if they don’t get their very favorite flavor? Tell students they are going to learn how the U.S. government was created, and that a lot of the process had to do with getting people to agree on things.

☐ DISTRIBUTE the reading page to the class.

☐ READ the reading with the class, pausing to discuss as appropriate. If you are using the PowerPoint presentation, the first five slides reinforce the reading material.

☐ CHECK for understanding using the Active Participation Mini-Quizzes, either by continuing the PowerPoint presentation or following the Active Participation Guide.

☐ PAIR students together.

☐ DISTRIBUTE scissors, tape or glue, and the 2-page cut & paste activity.

☐ DISCUSS the instructions for the cut & paste activity.

☐ ALLOW students time to complete the activity in pairs.

☐ REVIEW the answers with the class if you wish.

☐ DISTRIBUTE one crossword review to each student.

☐ ASSIGN students to complete the crossword review

☐ REVIEW the answers with the class if you wish.

☐ CLOSE by asking students to use scratch paper to sketch a T-chart with Articles of Confederation on the left and Constitution on the right. Have students fill in as many characteristics of each as they can without looking.
Independent Citizens Seek Awesome Government

When the American colonists gained their independence from the British after the Revolutionary War, the Americans were faced with a problem: What kind of government should they have? They’d lived for years under British rule, and they had lots of complaints. Now they would create a government from scratch, and they had a few requirements.

Their experience under heavy-handed British rule left the newly independent Americans a little bit skittish. Basically, they wanted a government that couldn’t do much. They started by drafting a document called the Articles of Confederation. A confederation is a group of individuals united together for a purpose—in this case, the 13 states that had been British colonies before the war. The Articles of Confederation explained how the 13 states would be governed as one nation. Here are the basics:

- Each state was independent and had its own government.
- Each state would send representatives to the “Congress of the Confederation,” a lawmaking body.
- Congress was the only branch of government. (No president or courts.)
- In Congress, each state got one vote.

A Rocky Start

On one hand, the Articles of Confederation had qualities that citizens appreciated. Because the Articles did not set up a very strong government, states got to keep their power and independence. There was no powerful government telling them what to do. Citizens also wanted protection, and the Articles gave Congress the power to create a military to protect all the states.

However, there were problems. For one thing, the Articles did not give Congress the power to enforce its laws. Congress also had no power to collect taxes to pay for the military. And in order to change the Articles, every single state had to agree to the changes. These and other problems meant that, in general, citizens felt like the relationship… er, the government, wasn’t working.

Lots of Differences

With thirteen different states, there was no easy solution. Here’s why:

- States had different needs. For example, some states depended on fishing, while others mostly grew crops.
- States had different sizes. Some states had many people; others had few.
- People had different opinions. Some people feared a central government, while others thought a central government was necessary.

That last one was especially troublesome. Many people feared they would lose their freedom if a central government had too much power. Others were tired of the weak government created under the Articles of Confederation and felt like nothing would ever get done if nobody was in charge.
Let’s Fix This Thing

In 1787, representatives from every state except Rhode Island met in Philadelphia to fix the Articles. We call this meeting the Constitutional Convention because they ended up doing more than just fixing the articles—they wrote the Constitution! But agreeing on a new way to structure the government wasn’t easy.

Some states floated a new idea: Why not create a government with three branches? The new government could have a legislative branch with a congress to make laws, an executive branch led by a president to carry out laws, and a judicial branch with courts to interpret laws. It sounded good, but there was one major problem: How many votes would each state get in the Congress?

Voting in Congress: Yes, It’s a Big Deal

Why? Because some states have a large population and some have a small population. Under the Articles of Confederation, each state got one vote no matter how many people it had. That meant people in large states had less influence in Congress. Naturally, large states thought this wasn’t fair. They thought they should get more votes because they had more people. Small states, however, thought it was a pretty good deal. Even though they were small, they had the same amount of power and influence as large states. They wanted to keep a one-vote-per-state system.

Battle of the Plans

Two different plans emerged—one favoring small states and one favoring large states. Can you tell which is which?

<th>New Jersey Plan</th>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Legislative branch has one chamber</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Each state gets one vote</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Constitution Solution

The two sides—large states and small states—finally reached a compromise. The Constitution was the second and final attempt to write a document that would govern the United States, and we still follow it today. Under the Constitution, Congress is divided into two chambers: the Senate and the House of Representatives. In the Senate, each state gets two votes no matter what size it is. This favors small states. In the House of Representatives, the more people a state has, the more votes it gets. This favors large states. The Constitution also solved some other problems found in the Articles of Confederation.

- The Articles didn’t require states to treat citizens from other states the same as their own citizens, but the Constitution does.
- The Articles couldn’t be changed unless all states agreed, but the Constitution can be changed if 3/4 of the states agree.
- The Articles didn’t require states to follow the laws Congress passed, but the Constitution says federal laws are superior to state laws.

The Americans were a lot like Goldilocks in the story about the three bears: They had to try different governments until they found one that was “just right!”

It’s All About Cause and Effect! When you look at causes and effects, you can see the relationships between different things that take place. Use what you learned in the reading to match causes and effects for different stages of America’s government.

1) Cut out the causes and effects below.
2) Look at the three categories on the cause/effect flow chart.
3) Match three cause/effect statements for each category on the flow chart.
4) Paste the cause and effect statements onto the chart under the correct categories. (Within each category, it doesn’t matter what order you paste them in.)
